"Are we there yet?"

On aimless rides with my parents the occasional accident finding local tomatoes or corn. It’s into the language at present from television, and kids ape the whine on the commercial; real parents get clubbed, therefore,

by the dreaded double whine.

All allusions from TV transforming the ordinary to pseudowit render life unbearable.